

McAllister Olivarius
Names John Randle
Head of Family Law Practice

McAllister Olivarius Names John Randle Head of Family Law Practice

LONDON (18 July, 2023)

International law firm McAllister Olivarius is pleased to announce that John Randle has joined as Head of the UK Family Practice.

John brings with him a wealth of experience in complex divorce cases. His past clients include household names in the world of sport, including British Olympians, Premier League footballers, international rugby players and others.

With offices in New York and Greater London, McAllister Olivarius has an international reputation for its work in civil litigation. With John in place, the firm's UK Practice will focus on working with high-net-worth individuals facing complex separations.

John has been a partner in large law firms and recently ran his own specialist divorce firm, John Randle Associates. He is recognised as a 'family expert' by Chambers and Partners and has been praised by other leading industry titles for his skill in dealing with a full range of divorce matters, including matrimonial finance, the division of business assets, and complex private child law issues such as international surrogacy, international adoption and special guardianship applications.

"I am delighted to announce that I have joined McAllister Olivarius as senior counsel and head of the firm's family practice. McAllister Olivarius has an unparalleled reputation in civil litigation, and I look forward to furthering our reputation for family and divorce work. We have ambitious plans for growth, and I will be looking to harness the drive, ambition, and creativity of our exceptional team to deliver outstanding results and exceptional service to our clients."

(John Randle)